

Hosting a dinner party

You're going to host a Roman dinner party!

You've decided to go all out and invite some of your friends to a spectacular evening - you're going to invite 6 guests, and you and two members of your family will be there too.

Now all you need to do is prepare!

What to eat

First of all, you're going to choose your food! Your cook has told you that he can find the foods listed below in time for your party:

gustatio (starter)	primae mensae (main)	secundae mensae (dessert)
Salads	Roast tuna	Stuffed dates
Radishes	Oysters	Figs
Mushrooms	Partridge	Honey cakes
Eggs	Lamb	Nuts
Oysters	Dormice	Apples and pears
Sardines	Broccoli	Grapes
	Beans	Cheese
	Artichokes

Write out your dinner's menu, choosing up to three dishes for each course:

gustatio:

primae mensae:

secundae mensae:

Entertainment

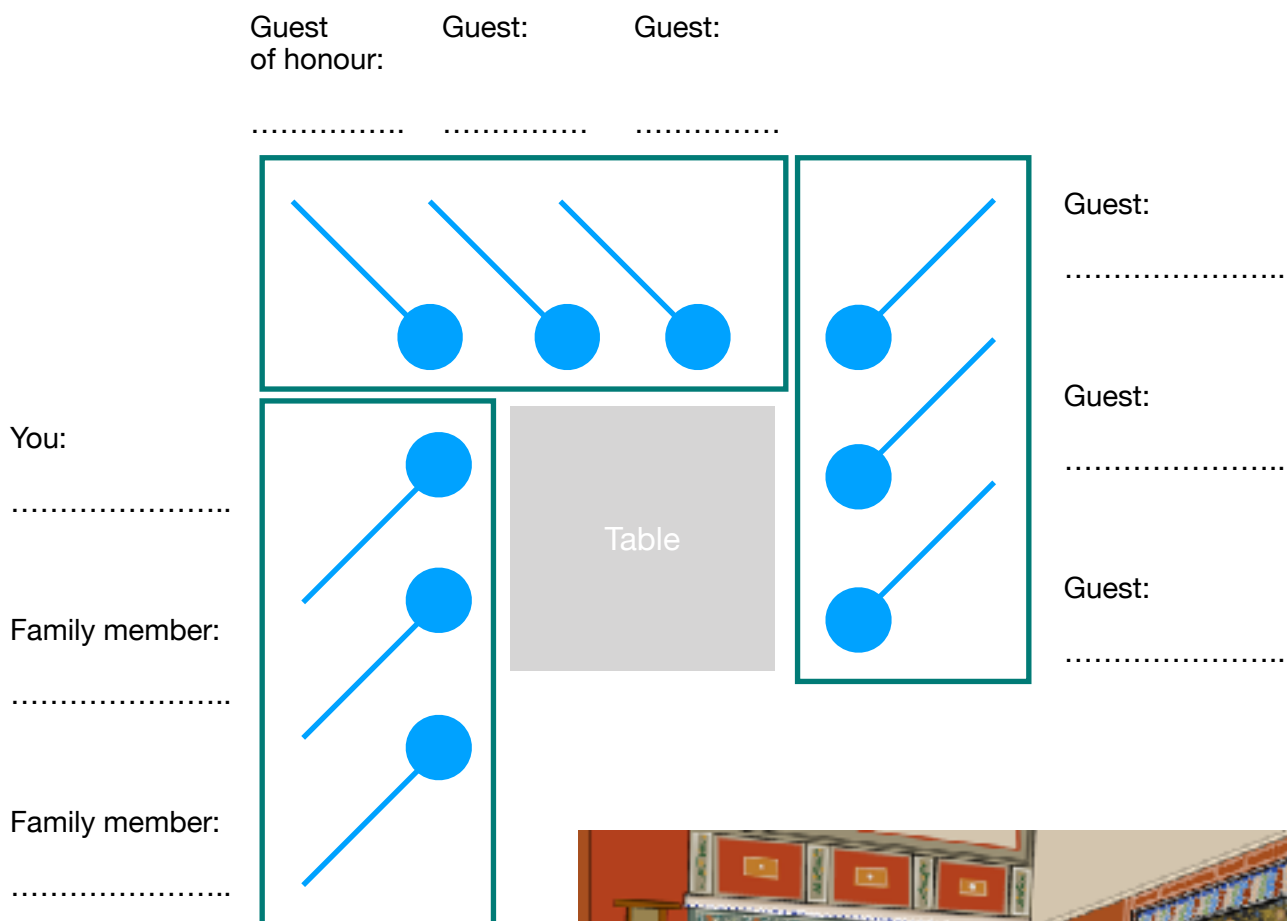

You want to arrange something fun for after dinner, to impress and entertain your guests. Choose two of these entertainers to be hired:

- | | | |
|--------------|-------------|-------------|
| Dancers | Jugglers | Acrobats |
| Flute player | Singer | |
| Fire eater | Mime artist | Storyteller |

Who lies where

Everybody had a special place at a dinner party. The left couch was for the host and their family, and the top couch, particularly the spot next to the host, was for the most important guests. Who will lie where at your party?

Enjoy your party!
